

Curriculum Aims and Purpose

History provides students with a broad range of historical knowledge and understanding, including a sense of chronological development over time and develop an appreciation of the people, culture, events, and attitudes of societies other than their own. Studying History at OIEA develops students' ability to analyse a wide variety of historical sources, study historical interpretations to help develop students to make informed judgements about key historical events and people. Lastly, by studying history students can learn from the mistakes of the past and provide them with transferable skills for future life.

Using the National Curriculum as a starting point and building on some KS2 topics, the curriculum at KS3 allows students to develop their subject knowledge chronologically through a knowledge rich curriculum. Each topic focuses around key areas on the role the State, Society and Religion has helped to shape Britain and the world around.

We go beyond the National Curriculum by ensuring students have access to historical scholarship, so students can analyse what historians have said and develop their own understanding around how historians form their opinions about the past. We teach our curriculum through 'big questions' to help make sense of the story of the past.

We ensure that we are a fully inclusive subject so study a wide range of cultures, races, gender, class or other factors.

We ensure students gain a deeper understanding of the diverse range of careers available to those who study History and include this into our curriculum. We help students to understand that in all jobs you need to work with people from a variety of backgrounds. Being able to understand differences is crucial in the world of work. History gives the skills required in a variety of jobs such as medicine, journalism, teaching, museum sector, charity sector, law, researching, politics and the civil service.

How our Curriculum inducts students into the discipline of the subject:

Studying history helps students develop critical thinking, analytical skills and a deeper understanding of cause and consequences. It fosters research abilities, encourages the evaluation of diverse perspectives, and cultivates effective communication skills. It equips students with a framework to comprehend different societies and how they have changed over time.

Year 7 Overview

Students begin their studies with a topic that focuses on history before 1066; investigating the Romans, Anglo-Saxons and Vikings. Afterwards students study a Local History unit, The Norman Conquest, Medieval World and finally a unit studying The Tudors.

Half Term	Focus
1	Pre-1066 unit 'How have invaders and settlers left their mark on England?' This unit builds on student's chronological knowledge of what happened prior to. It is a significant period as it saw great changes that helped to shape what Britain is like today. By studying this period students have a knowledge foundation of the change and continuity in England and the reasons that led to this.
2	Local History unit 'How much has life changed in the past 100 years in Ilkeston?' In doing this, students analyse the reasons why it is important to study local history and they also explore the interpretations of local Historians. Whilst doing this, students will be able to identify the similarities and difference over time and whether all changes are positive contributions to the local area.
3	The Norman Conquest unit – Explain how William caused a 'truckload of trouble' in England. This will allow you to build on your prior knowledge and to extend it by continuing to look at a pivotal point of British history which is the Norman Conquest. Through this unit you will be able to gain an understanding of the challenges to England through the death of Edward the Confessor and the emergence of the three claims to the throne.
4	The Norman Conquest unit – Explain how William caused a 'truckload of trouble' in England. This will allow you to build on your prior knowledge and to extend it by continuing to look at a pivotal point of British history which is the Norman Conquest. Through this unit you will be able to gain an understanding of the Norman conquest in terms of control and the introduction of the Feudal system and the Domesday book.
5	Medieval World unit 'What mattered to Medieval people?' and 'What mattered to Medieval People outside of Britain?' This will allow you to examine what life was like for Medieval people in Britain alongside life around the world at this time. Through this unit you will be able to gain an understanding of the similarities and differences in culture, technology and thinking and how it impacted life for people during the Medieval era.
6	The Tudors unit 'Why was religion such an issue for the early Tudors?' This unit allows students to examine the significance of religion during the Tudor era and how it affected the lives of people at the time. By giving students the context surrounding why Henry VIII changed religion and the differences in Edward's and Mary's religion, students will see the effects that this had on England.
